List of High school, College, or University Manufacturing Partnership Programs These are partnerships with manufacturers to help train future employees in certain skills:

Examples of HS programs:

1) MS Department of Education's Career and Technical Education Program - The Office of Career and Technical Education (CTE) and Workforce Development, helps train high school students to be members of a qualified workforce for today's competitive job market. The research-based programs meet national and/or accreditation standards. They also constantly evolve in response to changing workforce needs. Because Career and Technical Education is critical to our state's economic development, they often partner with local business leaders and legislators to achieve common goals.

2) Jobs for Mississippi Graduates (JMG) – The program is designed to work with high school students with barriers to success using research-based curriculum with reading and math built into each module. On the local level, each participating school partners with businesses to provide mentors, learning environments, and occasionally part-time employment to obtain work experiences.

3) Polymer Program @ Prentiss High School – The MS Polymer Institute at the University of Southern MS partners with Prentiss High School to provide polymer training related to the needs of industry.

Examples of Community College programs:

1) Furniture Academy - Itawamba Community College and Northeast Community formed a partnership with 15 furniture manufacturers to create the Furniture Academy. MS State University's Franklin Furniture Institute, Three Rivers Planning and Development District, and the MS Development Authority also provide support. The focus is to create pools of applicants capable of performing middle skilled jobs in the furniture industry, as well as other industries.

2) Maritime Training Academy – Each year, 400-600 apprentices are trained in 12 different program areas and who are co-enrolled as both students at MS Gulf Coast Community College and in the Ingalls Apprenticeship

Program. The facility will graduate a significant number of associate degree recipients in Maritime Technology. Apprentices take two classes each semester tuition-free over the course of their four-year apprenticeship program. Ingalls will pays the cost of training for these students.

3) There are many other examples around the state of community colleges partnering with local industry. By design, the state's community colleges develop curriculum and training programs based on the needs of the businesses located within their regions.

Examples of University Manufacturing Partnerships:

The Mississippi Polymer Institute at the University of Southern Mississippi provides commercial development, rapid prototyping, and testing services to Mississippi companies. Established in 1993 with the goal of assisting high-tech polymer and polymer-related industries, MPI serves as the outreach arm of the School of Polymers & High Performance Materials at The University of Southern Mississippi.

The Center for Manufacturing Excellence at the University of Mississippi is developing interdisciplinary educational opportunities within an innovative academic learning model providing students with the practical experiences, fundamental knowledge, and creative skillsets needed to lead the world of modern manufacturing.

The Center for Advanced Vehicular Systems (CAVS) is operated by Mississippi State and is an interdisciplinary center comprised of research, engineering design and development, and technology transfer teams for industry and government partners.

List of Additional Manufacturing Training Programs: See Above

List of Future Planned Manufacturing Training Programs If known please include expected implementation date:

Construction of East MS Community College's (EMCC) $38 million "Communiversity" will begin in 2017. The new home of EMCC's Manufacturing Technology & Engineering Division, will be located at the entrance to the Golden Triangle Global Industrial Aerospace Park, just a few miles from the Golden Triangle campus. The nearly 140,000-square-foot facility would accommodate EMCC Manufacturing Technology & Engineering Division credit and non-credit courses related to training workers for careers in advanced manufacturing. It is intended to enhance a growing manufacturing sector in East Mississippi by supporting workforce development for industries like Yokohama Tire, PACCAR, and Airbus Helicopter that already call the Golden Triangle home while also serving to lure more jobs to the region.

The facility will expand EMMC's workforce training capabilities to offer state and national credentials in important manufacturing and engineering sectors, including electromechanical, mechatronics, automation and controls, and precision machining technologies.

The facility also will host dual enrollment programs for high school students interested in transitioning directly into the workforce or pursuing applied technology degrees at universities.
